

HUSBAND FOUND BY EVENING WORLD

Using a Year, Michael Lantry
Discovered in an Asylum.

LIFE GIVES THANKS.

In Easy of Identification Gave Wrong Name When Entering
Institution at Islip.

The Evening World printed a story on Friday of the disappearance of Michael Lantry, of No. 411 West Fifth street, and how his wife had been looking for him almost a year. But yesterday evening Mrs. Lantry received a gram telling her a man resembling her husband was in Central Islip Hospital. The first time in exactly one year. In the story, briefly told, of the discovery of a helpful publicity. Mrs. Lantry in a letter to The Evening World gives this paper all the credit for finding her husband after she had been looking for him for a year. Although her husband is in the Manhattan State Hospital for the insane, he has been found by the uncertainty lifted from the finding of his wife's mind.

Mrs. Lantry had three distinguishing marks: a hair, a missing half-finger and a stammer in his speech. In the story she had dropped out of it on May 1, 1905, and though known to one in the neighborhood had not been seen since. Mrs. Lantry applied the police and searched the city institutions without avail. Then she wrote to The Evening World and the story of the day it was printed, she had given herself up to the hope of a year before another name. Identification followed.

Mrs. Lantry writes: "The Evening World and you for finding my husband for me. I got a telegram Saturday night telling me that he was in the Manhattan State Hospital. I went there Sunday and saw him. He had always been the same as the Evening World says. I am ever gratefully yours, MRS. LANTRY, No. 411 West Fifth street."

The Gaekwar of Baroda.

BY WALTER A. SINCLAIR.
From the shores of far Baroda, where the breakers foam like soda,
Comes the Gaekwar of Baroda with his comic-opera name.
When he lands here in our city he will sing an entrance ditty,
For all comic-opera rulers take the spot-light with that same.
When he steps off of his steamer, he should vocalize a screamer.
On the customs of the cusses in Baroda bright and gay,
Adding as a special favor just a little New York flavor,
And, assisted by the chorus, it perhaps would go this way:

"We're a simple-living people in Baroda.
In a bungalow I live, not a pagoda,
We have brigands now and then,
But no life insurance men,
No fads and fancy muck rakes to adjust.
Though our oxen and our camels may need urging,
We are never stung by rapid-transit merging.
In my distant Hindoo home
We've no sleep-billiteroma,
And as we don't use gas, we have no trust."

Yes! this is the style of patter which the Chief of the Mahratta is expected to deliver, though it's likely he will not.
But no doubt he'll talk a column on world politics so solemn
When we pine to hear the latest of the gay Akhond of Swat.
Now Khoutalokorn is aching. Habibulla Khan is taking
His vacation out in Nepal with Surendra Shamsher Jang.
All these other queer-named fellows would let out tremendous bellows
If the Gaekwar of Baroda with the giddy chorus sang:

"In Baroda we've no Brooklyn Bridge Hog crushes
We've no Raines-law paper sandwiches for lushes.
We've no busy fake-art staffs
Cutting dates from photographs
To make it seem 'twas taken yesterday.
We haven't any nice wide-open pool-rooms.
For murderers we have some deep and cool tombs.
We wouldn't stir up strife
Over Gorky and his 'wife'
In little old Baroda far away."

The Gaekwar of Baroda on His Way to New York

LIVERPOOL, May 4.—On the Celtic, of the White Star Line, that sails from this port for New York to-morrow the most important passenger will be His Highness, the Gaekwar of Baroda. He is accompanied by his wife and daughter and intends to tour the States and Canada in an official visit to friends.

The Gaekwar is a Mahratta chief of the highest caste. Baroda, his native State, is in the Bombay Presidency, and he ranks as one of the most capable and advanced rulers. If he sees fit on any occasion during his visit to New York to don his robes of office and his own jewels he will undoubtedly dazzle all beholders. He has a great collection of precious stones, many of which have been in the possession of his family for more than five years. He carries a large part of these with him on his travels.

NEW JERSEY TAKES UP CRANE'S CHARGE.

Magistrate Called Attention of Officials to Injustice in Industrial Insurance Case.

Magistrate Crane in Harlem Police Court is keeping up his fight on the so-called industrial insurance companies. To-day he received two letters. One from Gov. Stokes of New Jersey said the case of Mrs. Kate Wright, whose efforts to induce the Prudential Life to give her a fair settlement upon a policy, had been referred to him by the Magistrate had been sent to the Commissioner of Banking and Insurance for a report.

The other letter was from Mrs. David Le Long, of No. 306 West One Hundred and Forty-fifth street, who wrote that in July, 1895, she took out a policy for $100 on the life of her mother, Mrs. Christina Becker in the Metropolitan Life, and had already paid in $300 in premiums and is still forced to pay in fifty cents a week in order not to lose the $100.

Three Squadrons and Castle
William Exchange Salutes
As Visitors Sail Away.

RIVER CRAFT JOIN IN.

Whistle and Siren Add to Din as the Black Fighting Kettles Pass Down and Out of the Harbor.

Rear-Admiral Paul-Alexandre Camille, a special mission fleet of the French navy, sailed from New York to-day amid the firing of the formal salutes by the three squadrons and the guns of Castle William. Admiral Camille, in his flag-ship, "Marsellaise," led the friendly retreat from the Hudson River at 120 this afternoon, the homeward-bound pennant streaming from the foremast peak.

As the aquatic black fighting machines of France steamed slowly away from their anchorage off Seventy-second street the guns of Admiral Brown's cruiser squadron boomed with the firing salute. On board the West Virginia the band, assembled on the deck, crashed into the strains of the "Marsellaise," while mingling with it came the return compliment—"The Star Spangled Banner"—played by the band on the "Marsellaise."

The white-jacketed tars on the West Virginia, Pennsylvania, Maryland and Colorado "trimmed" the yards and rigging with their white-dad forms. While the Marsellaise, Admiral Aubé and Conde steamed out with their crews festooning the decks and fighting tops. All along the river the big fighting kettles were saluted by whistles and
